

The Nottingham Centre for Globalisation and Economic Policy (GEP)

Report on activities

2021 and 2022

1. Overview and membership

The Research Centre that is now the Nottingham Centre for Research on Globalisation and Economic Policy (GEP) was founded in 1999 as ‘GLM’, a large research project on globalisation and labour markets, funded by a £1m research grant from The Leverhulme Trust. Subsequent additional grants from The Leverhulme Trust totalling £3.5 allowed the launch of the GEP Research Centre. With the formation of GEP, research on globalisation and labour markets became a strand of GEP, and research projects on ‘globalisation, productivity and technology’, ‘China and the world economy’ and ‘theory and methods’ were added.

GEP became the major centre in Europe studying the impact of globalisation and economic policy and one of the biggest of its kind in the world. The Centre has an impressive international reputation; its academics have advised the Treasury, the House of Commons, the World Bank, the IMF, the WTO and the United Nations.

Since its inception, GEP has run:

- a weekly seminar series, attracting speakers from the UK, Europe and worldwide;
- annual international conferences;
- an annual conference for PhD students working in international economics;
- a research paper series;
- a monthly internal workshop programme;
- several annual public lecture series.

In 2008, GEP broadened its reach and established branches at the University of Nottingham's overseas campuses in China and Malaysia, to provide a base for GEP within growing economies in Asia.

2. Highlights of GEP Activities for the reporting period

2a. 2021

- Seminar Series. During this reporting period, GEP organized a very active weekly field online seminar. We had a total of 17 speakers from leading institutions such as Princeton, Berkeley, Boston University and University of Michigan.
- Conferences. During 2021 GEP organized/co-organized ? conferences (see programs in the Appendix):
 - On May 6-8, 2021 GEP organised, in co-operation with CEPR, its 19th Annual Postgraduate Conference. Presenters from Europe and US from top economics departments such as University of California, Berkeley, Princeton and Sciences Po.
 - On May 27-28 2021, GEP/CEPR organised an online workshop “Education Economics”. Keynote speaker: Miguel Urquiola, Columbia University.
 - On June 14-15,2021 GEP hosted an online Summer International Trade Workshop” involving high profile speakers from a series of leading institutions including, Berkeley, Yale, MIT etc.

- On June 21-22, 2021 GEP organized together with ERC, CEPR and UCL an online workshop on “Firm-to-firm trade and international production networks”. Keynote speaker: Amit Khandelwal (Columbia Business School).
- Nottingham Globalisation Lectures. This is a series of lectures aimed mainly at our undergraduate students, featuring prominent speakers actively engaged in the public debate on issues related to globalisation and economic policy in general. The series is currently generously sponsored by one of our former alumni, Mr. Martin Totty. During 2021, the following lecture took place:
 - - Martin Wolf, Associate Editor and Chief Economics Commentator, The Financial Times, gave a lecture on March 11th, 2021 on “The World Economy in 2030”.
- World Economy Lectures.

- Nottingham Lectures in International Economics.
 - Due to the COVID pandemic the Lecture was not held.

2b. 2022

- Seminar Series. During this reporting period, GEP organized a very active weekly field seminar. We hosted a total of 21 speakers, including colleagues from leading institutions such as Bonn, Chicago, Paris School of Economics, the IHEID, Tel Aviv University and Zurich.
- Conferences. During 2022 GEP organized/co-organized two conferences (see programs in the Appendix):
 - On April 28-30, 2022 GEP organised, in co-operation with CEPR, its 20th Annual Postgraduate Conference. This was an online event. Keynote speakers were Professor Teresa Fort (Dartmouth College) and Professor David Nagy (CREI). Presenters were from US and Europe to include University of Michigan, Yale, Amsterdam, Paris and Stockholm

- On June 2-4, 2022 GEP hosted its 4th Summer International Trade Workshop on “The effects of international trade”. This was an in-person event and included speakers from Yale, UC Berkeley, LSE and the University of Geneva among others.

- World Economy Lectures.
 - This year’s World Economy Lecture was on 23 March 2022 and was presented by Beata Javorcik, Chief Economist, European Bank for Reconstruction and Development and Professor, University of Oxford. The title was “War on Ukraine: The global fallout”.

Grant Capture

In April 2022 the ESRC has established the Centre for Inclusive Trade Policy (CITP), of which several GEP Fellows are members. This is a large, strategic investment by the ESRC over the 2022-2027 period, with an overall budget of approximately £12 million. Nottingham’s share of the budget exceeds £2.2 million.

3. Research Themes

GEP research activities are organized around four broad themes: Political Economy of Globalisation; Globalisation and Labour Markets, Globalisation, Productivity and Technology; and China and the World Economy. All four programs have been very active in the past year. In the next pages, we present a summary of their activity.

Theme 1: Political Economy of Globalization

The Political Economy of Globalisation programme (PEG) is directed towards research on how political economy forces shape international trade in goods and factor movements. The programme combines theoretical and empirical methods to examine the processes through which trade and migration policies come into place, and their effect on outcomes.
