Introduction

1.1 Purpose

This index is a finding aid for locating personal names in books about English place-names, primarily those published by the English Place-Name Society (EPNS). The principal purpose is to help researchers evaluate the probability of existence of conjectural personal names when considering new etymologies.

The main index is an alphabetical list of those personal names which have been suggested to occur as elements in place-names, disregarding whether or not those suggestions are generally accepted. It is not itself a source of personal-name records, and so should never be cited as an authority on names. Instead, all data located with the help of this index should be checked in the original sources, especially before basing any arguments on them. In most cases, reference will need to be made to the indices in the EPNS volumes to locate the material. It should also be emphasized that this is not a list of specific identifiable people; it is an index of name-forms or name-types. The index also contains Anglo-Saxon personal names from additional (non-place-name) sources, to provide context. Precise details are in the next section. The project to create this index was announced on 28 March 2015 at the Norwich meeting of the Society for Name Studies in Britain and Ireland.

1.2 Coverage

Counties included are as follows, with the page numbers of lists of personal names in EPNS volumes where these were used.

Bd Bedfordshire. Mawer et al. (PN BdHu: 286–9). For field-names indicated BdHu, see the note under Huntingdonshire.

Brk Berkshire. Gelling (PN Brk 3: 919–22). The personal names in boundary-marks of charters on pp.793–4 are omitted, as these are covered in the Anglo-Saxon Charters series (these are mostly charters from Abingdon).

- Bk Buckinghamshire. Mawer et al. (PN Bk: 252–6). The field-names on pp.260–1 are included, though in most cases the parishes are not identified.
- Ca Cambridgeshire. Reaney (PN C: 308–9).
- Ch Cheshire. Dodgson (PN Ch 5 (1:ii): 406–23). When references are given, they are to part number and page number to the volumes of the printed edition.
- Cu Cumberland. Armstrong et al. (PN Cu 3: 504–8). Whaley (Dict LD) has not been excerpted.
- Db Derbyshire. Cameron (PN Db 3: 761–4). The field-names on pp.761–4 are included, though the parishes are not identified.
- D Devon. Gover et al. (PN D 2: 681–7).
- Do Dorset. The personal-name table in Mills (PN Do 5: 273–283) (but not the surnames) is incorporated. Versions of this index from before 2023-01-01 had the major names only from Mills (PN Do 1, PN Do 2, PN Do 3, PN Do 4); the change adds 46 new headforms, and 328 new place-names.
- Du County Durham. Watts (PN Du 1: 261–2); OE and ON names only. See also Northumberland and Durham below. epns_dict_durham has not been excerpted.
- Ess Essex. Reaney (PN Ess: 570–2).
- Gl Gloucestershire. Smith (PN Gl 4: 203–12).
- Ha Hampshire. Coates (1989). See below for the Isle of Wight.
- He Herefordshire. Coplestone-Crow (2009).
- Hrt Hertfordshire. Gover et al. (PN Hrt: 247–8).
- Hu Huntingdonshire. Mawer et al. (PN BdHu: 289–91). The field-names on pp.297–301, of which the county and parish are not identified, are included under the siglum BdHu.
- IoM Isle of Man: no coverage. Broderick (2006) has not been excerpted.
- IoW Isle of Wight. Mills (2001).
- KW Kent. The situation is complex; the most complete survey is Wallenberg (1934), but this work suffers from a large number of highly speculative etymologies, and a failure to make clear statements of opinion. Nevertheless, Wallenberg’s suggestions for all major names and a selection of minor names are included here under the siglum KW. To excerpt Wallenberg (1931) is not necessary because it is based on charter material better covered in the Anglo-Saxon Charters volumes. There is more data, and better philology, in Cullen (1997: 706–713), but only for the lathes of St Augustine and Shipway. These are not yet included in the present index.
- La Lancashire. Personal names are extracted from Ekwall (1922).

- Le Leicestershire. Personal names are taken from Cox (PN Le 8: 20–31). All parishes in Leicestershire are covered, but the parish of field-names is not given in the source. Cox (2005) has not been excerpted.
- Li Lincolnshire. Cameron (PN Li 1, PN Li 2) and Cameron et al. (PN Li 3, PN Li 4, PN Li 5, PN Li 6, PN Li 7). Personal names in major place-names in areas not yet covered in the full survey are taken from Cameron (1998).
- Mx Middlesex. Gover et al. (PN Mx: 193–4).
- Nf Norfolk. Only part of the county is covered, with the major names from Sandred (PN Nf 2, PN Nf 3). The city of Norwich (PN Nf 1) is not covered.
- Nth Northamptonshire. Gover et al. (PN Nth: 257–8). The field-names on pp.290–2 are included, though the parishes are not identified.
- ND Northumberland and County Durham. Mawer (1920: 243–54). See also Durham above.
- Nt Nottinghamshire. Gover et al. (PN Nt: 272–4).
- O Oxfordshire. Gelling (PN O 2: 476–81).
- R Rutland. Cox (PN Ru: 433–4).
- Sa Shropshire. Gelling (PN Sa 1) covered all major place-names, and personal names in her etymologies are included here. Her later volumes (PN Sa 2; PN Sa 3; PN Sa 4; PN Sa 5; PN Sa 6) re-examine many of these place-names in more detail, and any revisions to the personal names are included here, along with personal names in a few minor names. The three most recent volumes by Baker (PN Sa 7), Baker and Carroll (PN Sa 8), and Cavill (PN Sa 9) published since 2018 have not been excerpted, and a complete picture of this county will have to await completion of the survey.
- So Somerset. Data from pre-publication draft of an EPNS dictionary of Somerset place-names (with thanks to Jennifer Scherr).
- St Staffordshire. Data from Horovitz (2005: 633–7) only; Oakden (PN St 1) is not used.
- Sf Suffolk. Major names from Briggs and Kilpatrick (2016), with additional minor names from draft material for a full survey of the county expected to appear as Briggs (forthcoming ?2025); these names are provisional and may not appear in any eventual printed volumes.
- Sr Surrey. Gover et al. (PN Sr: 353–4). The field-names on pp.401–2 are included, though the parishes are not identified, and many of these come from charters of dubious authenticity.
- Sx Sussex. Mawer et al. (PN Sx 2: 553–7). The field-names on pp.563–4 are included.
- Wa Warwickshire. Gover et al. (PN Wa: 317–9).

- We Westmorland. Smith (PN We 2: 312–7). Whaley (Dict LD) has not been excerpted.
- W Wiltshire. Gover et al. (PN W: 418–20).
- Wo Worcestershire. Mawer et al. (PN Wo: 380–7). The field-names on pp.394–9 are included, though the parishes are not identified. Many of these are from pre-Conquest charters of dubious authenticity, and a good edition of these charters is awaited.
- YE Yorkshire, East Riding. Smith (PN YE: 315–8).
- YN Yorkshire, North Riding. Smith (PN YN: 321–4).
- YW Yorkshire, West Riding. Smith (PN YW 8: 298–305).

In addition, all names from the Prosopography of Anglo-Saxon England (PASE, www.pase.ac.uk) project are included. A notation such as ‘PASE5’ means that PASE records five individuals with this name. Note that PASE restricts its range to pre-Conquest sources only, with the omission of names in the Durham Liber Vitae which are included here indicated DLV. PASE has some anomalies: as examples, the name Æscmann is said to have two bearers, but only one is listed, and this name is distinguished for no reason from Æscman with seven bearers; and the man under the headform Cælin is given as being named Caelin, and is identical to the man under that headform. There are also ghost names in PASE, such as Cytelbeam, a misreading of Cytelbearn in Sawyer 679 (Woodman 2012: 112). But as the present index is non-judgemental, these are preserved (except for correction of the counts where an error has been noted). Also included are the personal names proposed to explain charter boundary points in the Anglo-Saxon Charters series published by OUP for the British Academy (Campbell 1973; Sawyer 1979; Kelly 1995, 1996, 1998; Miller 2001; Kelly 2004, 2007, 2005; Crick 2007; Kelly 2009, 2012; Woodman 2012; Brooks and Kelly 2013a,b; Kelly 2015, 2021). These are denoted ASCh⟨volume⟩.⟨charter number⟩; for example ASCh5.11 is charter 11 in volume 5, and ASCh7–8.28 is charter 28 in the two-volume set comprising volumes 7 and 8 (the Abingdon charters). The charter numbers here are unique to these volumes; in some cases an equivalent S number from Sawyer’s catalogue is given (Sawyer 1968). Some of these items will repeat personal names already listed from EPNS volumes, but generally in a better form, one taking account of more recent scholarship.

Together, these sources should comprise a large majority of recorded or conjectured Anglo-Saxon personal names, as well as a good many names of other types. The major exception is names on coins, for which a good starting point is Colman (1992). Medieval surnames are generally excluded, though some are captured as components of field-names.

1.3 Editorial conventions

All data is presented in a form as close as possible as the original printed editions, even preserving inconsistencies. This can result in the multiplication of headforms which are really identical, such as Æthelflæd, Æþelflæd, and Æðelflæd. Even worse, there are ten different spellings of the Scandinavian name Ásbjörn. The user needs to be alert to these; fortunately, the equivalent forms will normally be adjacent in the index. Headforms are sorted in normal alphabetical order, ignoring diacritics, with both ð and þ sorted in the position of th. Any asterisks preposed to the names by the editors are removed; the user will have to make his or her own judgment about the existential status of a name. These modifications are made, to aid finding names: items in the original lists such as ‘Blæcca, -i’ are expanded to ‘Blæcca, Blæcci’, and items such as ‘Blæcca, Blæcci’ are then split into ‘Blæcca’ and ‘Blæcci’. These are then entered under the two separate headforms, with a ‘see also’ field (typeset as “(↔other name)”) linking to the other name.

Italicizations in the source volumes have been preserved, and indicate lost or obsolete place-names. These are not fully consistent; for example italics are not used in Staffordshire names here, because they were not used in the source volume. The languages given in brackets after each name (omitted if it is just OE) are the cumulative collection from all the instances of that name. In some cases this can mean that the authors do not agree on the language of the name. A question mark can have at least two meanings: that the form of the personal name is uncertain, or that the derivation of the place-name from the specified personal name is uncertain. Double question marks are used to express serious doubt. Feminine names are indicated in blue, though this is not necessarily applied consistently to ME names. A failure in a source to mark a name as feminine (such as Sigedryð) is here maintained.

1.4 Examples of usage

Suppose it is desired to find evidence for an OE personal name stem Gæg- or Gæg-. No name of this pattern is recorded independently, but the index gives Gæg Gaysham (KW); Gæg Gazeley (Sf), Gayshamhall (Ess); Gæga ?ASCh7–8.127; Gayton (Nth), Gaydon (Wa); Gæga Guist (Nf), ?Gaywode Hall, Gayton (St); Gæg(a) ??Gayton (He); Gægi Guist (Nf). Even if some of these are doubtful, the cumulative evidence is considerable. The serious onomastician would now consult all the EPNS and other volumes referenced here and evaluate the evidence contained in the complete lists of forms, for example to determine the correct vowel length, and if possible disambiguate the Gæg, Gægi, and Gæga types.

As another example, we note that the feminine name Ælgyth is common in independent use, with ten examples in PASE. But is it equally common in place-names? The index gives ten place-name examples under the headings Ælgȳth, Ælgyð, and Ælfgyþ. This makes Ælfgyþ one of the more frequent feminine names in place-names.

1.5 The literature on early personal names in Britain

The Onomasticon Anglo-Saxonicum of Searle (1897) was the first serious attempt to list Anglo-Saxon names from all sources available at the time. The work of Middendorff (1902) included conjectural personal names reconstructed from boundary points in Anglo-Saxon charters.

To pursue research on a name found in the present index, reference will need to be made to one or more of the following reference works: Schönfeld (1911), Forssner (1916), Redin (1919), von Feilitzen (1937), Tengvik (1938), von Feilitzen (1945), Seltén (1969, 1972, 1975, 1979), von Feilitzen (1968, 1963, 1976), Kitson (2002), Insley (2009), and Colman (2014). Insley (2000) has an analysis of the requirements of anthroponymic indices. Some aspects of the earlier Germanic background are explored in Müller (1970) and Schramm (2013). Comparisons with Old Saxon names can be made by referring to Schlaug (1955, 1962). Kuhn (1961) has valuable comments on names starting with P. Rollason and Rollason (2007) and Rollason (2015) have detailed analyses of the personal names in the Durham Liber Vitae and Thorney Liber Vitae. For names of women, see Stenton (1943), Clark (1978), Hough (2002), and Okasha (2011). For the possibility that an apparent Wulfrun in place-names may actually refer to the wolverine, see Briggs (2019) and Insley (2020), and on the mysterious element purte (possibly seen in Purta and Purtel), see Briggs (2019–2021).

On Scandinavian names, one may consult Lind (1905–15, 1920–21), Zachrisson (1919), Whitelock (1937–45), Adigard des Gautries (1954), von Feilitzen (1965), Fellows Jensen (1968), and Insley (1982, 1985, 1994).

Important reference works on medieval surnames are Fransson (1935) and Thuresson (1950). Especially on occupational surnames, see McClure (2010a,b), and on evidence for migration, see McClure (1979). Links to modern surnames can be studied with the help of Hanks et al. (2016).

1.6 Informatics

This database contains 12693 headforms (counting spelling variations as distinct), and 16484 place-name forms in total. 8160 of the headforms are not in PASE (64.3%). Amongst all headforms, 566 are feminine (4.5%), and 358 headforms not in PASE are feminine (2.8%). Feminine names are denoted in this colour. Note that these statistics are approximate, because not all feminine names will have been correctly identified. This typeset volume is automatically generated from an underlying YAML database, the YAML being generated from separate text files for each county. Using the database version of 2021-01-13, Ælfric is the most frequently recorded name in PASE (205 instances), while Wicga is the most frequently recorded name in place-names (45 instances). Hræfn has the highest ratio PN/PASE (at about 51), whereas Æthelric has the highest ratio PASE/PN (about 130).

1.7 Acknowledgements

Some of the EPNS names here were harvested as part of the JISC-funded project, the Digital Exposure of English Place-Names (DEEP). The help of Jayne Carroll in providing the DEEP data is acknowledged. Shropshire and Lincolnshire items are from draft lists supplied by Jayne Carroll. David Horovitz kindly provided the list from pp.633–7 of his book (Horovitz 2005). Names from the Durham Liber Vitae are indicated by DLV; these are taken from the edition Rollason and Rollason (2007), and are missing in PASE. David Rollason and Susan Kelly kindly gave permission for the use of material from their publications. Kathryn Bullen proof-read the entire work and suggested several improvements.
