

'RACE' IN SOCIAL POLICY TEACHING AND LEARNING

Where are we now and where should we go?

The Missing Dimension: Where is 'Race' in Social Policy Teaching and Learning? - Professor Gary Craig, University of Newcastle

Experiences of BAME Students at the UoN - Ms Catherine Williams, University of Nottingham

A Lecturer's Perspective: a critical reflection of teaching 'Race' and 'Racism'
Dr Jo Britton, University of Sheffield

Student Voices - Students from University of Swansea and University of Nottingham

A Reflection on the plenary presentations (online)
Professor Karen Rowlingson, University of York, SPA Chair

Diversifying the Social Policy Curriculum- Dr Barbara Adewumi and Dr Lavinia Mitton, University of Kent

Progressive Relational Pedagogy and AAMG - Mr Johanne Gilroy, Ms Maxine Greaves, Principles of Success C.I.C.

Enhancing the Learning Experience of BAME Students - Dr Hyun-Joo Lim, Bournemouth University

In association with

University of Nottingham

UK | CHINA | MALAYSIA

Social Policy and Society

Special Issue:

'Race', Learning and Teaching in Social Policy

Free access until 31st May 2022

A Teaching and Learning Day to discuss issues around racial equality in social policy
teaching and learning.

Friday May 20th
2022

East Midlands
Conference Centre,
Nottingham and online
10-4pm

On-site: racesocpol.eventbrite.co.uk
Online: racesocpolonline.eventbrite.co.uk

Presentations in the morning plenary session and afternoon workshops include a critical overview, reports on research findings on teaching and learning, case studies and students' experiences.

Students will also play an active role as presenters, facilitators and discussants alongside academics and professionals.

Participants are welcome to join the full day's programme on-site or attend the morning session only online. A limited number of stipends are available for students travelling from outside of Nottingham.

This event is free! To avoid disappointment, please register as soon as possible via Eventbrite. All on-site participants will also be served a complimentary lunch at De Vere Conference Centre.

This event is supported by the Social Policy Association, Social Policy and Society and the University of Nottingham International Centre for Public and Social Policy

SPA
SOCIAL POLICY
ASSOCIATION